lately arrived Artillery Battalion; and it is hoped that the Honolulu detail of Uncle Sam's boys will find their lines laid in a pleasant place. The natural desire is to have a look about the country, to obtain a knowledge of the surroundings of the camp, or barracks; to note the peculiarities of Nature's handiwork, in and about Honolulu. In this the Soldier visitor must help himself, but he may obtain a most useful and valuable assistant, one who will reduce the time, the distance, the expense of sightseeing and who will always be ready to accompany him in his jaunts. This useful assistant may be either a high grade Crescent or Remington bicycle, and which must be sold for less than cost, to make room for a carload of Sterling bicycles now in transit. Members of Company I, N. A. and K will find a bargain in our machines. The terms are easy, the prices are low, the wheels strong and faithfully constructed. Give us a call.

ment on His Tributes.Miss Waldorf and Support—Relative Merits
—The Star's Excellent Parthenia.There are straws floating on the sea of the great public which indicate to the mind of the newspaper man which way the wind of opinion blows in certain directions. Apropos a hypercritical gentleman yesterday wondered why the critic of the Advertiser did not condemn rather than praise the Janet Waldorf company. When asked why, he said that the properties were bad, that there were dry goods boxes on the stage. When asked what this had to do with the reading of the lines he replied that to him everything. It distracted his "artistic eye" and furthermore that the support was bad therefore the star could not be a genius.
Strange reasoning. Within a given number of persons a certain proportion think alike. Let these be answered.A star is usually great in proportion as the public and critics consider the support to be poor. If one could turn back to the criticisms of Edwin Booth it will be found, except when starring with Lawrence Barrett or playing alternative nights in London with Henry Irving, that his support was invariably bad—very bad. His colossal genius overtopped them all, even though the best stock actors and actresses in the land were employed as his support.This illustration has, perhaps, over-shot the mark, because the two companies cannot be compared, but it is questionable whether Miss Waldorf's genius would not rise above any support that could be given her and the very best seem bad. Her debut in London will tell the story. Many a better stock company than Miss Waldorf's support have traveled the road, but, although they may not be lauded to the skies, they cannot as a whole be called poor.Miss Waldorf's Parthenia last evening was a work of art. Her simple Greek dress of pure white set off her beauty far more brilliantly than her rich costumes in the Lady of Lyons.
Her marvelous facility in grasping marked contrasts was exhibited in her sudden change from the sprightly innocent girl who would not hear of marriage, desiring rather to roam the hills, to the noble heroic woman who risked life, everything, to save her father. Her large dark eyes were as lustrous as stars while she critically and contemptuously watched the miser Polydor recounting his requirements of a wife. But her scenes in the forest, conquering Ingomar, the barbarian, were beyond criticism. Here again the value of contrasts which rise rapidly and frequently from sweet and childlike innocence to the full power of virtuous womanhood. The "Divine Mary" had not a greater conception of contrasts.There are only two parts in Ingom-ar—the barbarian and Parthenia.
Mr. McVay's Ingomar was exceptionally good. In fact, he is one of the only two or three living Ingomars. No one could look the part better. His conception of the value of contrasts in acting to fit the measuring of the lines, so necessary in this play, was also particularly good and saved him from overacting which is so often the fault in playing the role. Mr. McGregor also deserves praise for his make-up and conception of Polydor.Thursday evening comes the Hunchback where Miss Waldorf will be seen in a wholly different aspect having to wear four elegant costumes in the last three acts. F. H. A.Hand-Ball.The semi-finals in the Y. M. C. A. handball tournament were finished yesterday. The contestants were H. E.
Coleman and W. H. Coney. The former won out by a score of 21-1, 21-18.
This leaves H. E. Coleman and J. B.
Cohen to play the finals. This contest will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock and should prove interesting.
Both are good players and in order to work up to the finals have had to win from good men.$100,000,000 FOR CHARITY.LONDON, April 20.—Baroness Hirsch

Not so with J. J. Williams, the photographer. There are eleven faces on Mr. Williams' ticker. The ten extras are those of the artist and his family.
The watch has excited a good deal of interest amongst photographers generally. Each face is very clear. The
